Irving Berlin's White Christmas

December 6 - 31

"...It's Berlin's glorious music that truly makes this ornament shine."
— Oakland Tribune

The forecast calls for snow — and it's coming just in time for the holidays! This new energetic stage version of the beloved 1954 movie classic — featuring Irving Berlin's most famous song — will have its regional premiere at the Arts Center this December. The plot follows a couple of World War II GIs-turned Broadway performers who pair up with a sister act to produce a Christmas Eve show in an effort to save a struggling Vermont Inn owned by their ex-commanding officer. Sweetly wrapped around 25 of Berlin's biggest hits, the show takes audiences back to a time when life was simpler and snow was on everyone's Christmas wish list. Along with the title tune, this song-and-dance spectacular includes such charmers as "Blue Skies," "Sisters," "I Love a Piano" and "Count Your Blessings." Heartwarming, uplifting and lots of fun, White Christmas is the perfect holiday gift for the entire family.

And they make great holiday gifts!

Neil Simon's The Odd Couple

February 6 - March 4

"Neil Simon at his very, very best."
— NYTheatre.com

Obsessive neatnik. Disheveled slob. Probably not the ideal pairing of roommates — unless the match-maker is the irresistibly clever Neil Simon. Those loveable New York bachelors, Felix Unger and Oscar Madison, are back slinging zingers and rapid-fire one-liners in this hilarious Tony Award-winning play by Broadway's king of comedy. Both recently thrown out of marriages and sharing an apartment, the two friends quickly begin to get on each others nerves and that of their poker-playing pals. Oscar, a fun-loving sportswriter, revels in his sloppiness. To him, a ketchup stain on a white shirt is a mark of distinction. Felix, on the other hand, is a finicky photographer obsessed with purifying the air and removing every speck of dust from Oscar's eight-room apartment. But despite their quirky habits and dissimilar lifestyles, their friendship endures. Simon's most celebrated comedy, The Odd Couple will have you howling out of the theater!

Fiddler on the Roof

April 25 - May 27

"One of the great works of American musical theatre." — Daily News

Teve ... he is like a fiddler on a roof, teetering between a deep respect for tradition and an unconditional love for his daughters, he struggles to hold on to his beliefs in the face of changing social mores and tumultuous times. The story of this Jewish dairyman eking out a living in a little Russian village at the turn of the century, has touched audiences around the world with its humor, warmth and honesty. Winner of nine Tony Awards, including Best Musical, this classic of American theater radiates with such rousing musical numbers as "Tradition," "Matchmaker," "If I Were a Rich Man" and "Sunrise, Sunset." You'll laugh, you'll cry, you'll be on your feet dancing with your arms raised high. La Chaim!

A Chorus Line

June 19 - July 29

"Innovative, sensationally successful ... the kind of coup de theatre that seems to have been created in a single burst of breathtaking inspiration." — The New York Times
